I have always had a passion for modelling from an early age. When i was young i used to lock myself in my mothers room ,try on her makeup,practise poses in front of the mirror and imagine it was a camera.I was later picked for a ribena advert when i was 9 and that was how my modelling career began.

My fashion style is a mixture of AfroStreet with a hint of sassy glamour.

My style icon is Rihanna .I love how she flatters most looks. She is not afraid to break the rules.I don't think there should be rules when it comes to fashion.

The most interesting shoot I've done was a lingerie shoot. Since it was and is still is a dream for me to become a Victoria Secrets Angel, I felt like I was living my dream for the few hours.

With that being said, there is often a lot more going on behind a photo shoot than the finished picture presents.

What I like most about modelling is the transformation that takes place.Then with a good photographer and the right lighting, you become somebody else during the shoot, which you will live on in the photos.

My wordrobe staples are nice fitting blazers,chunky necklaces and of course a nice pair of fitting pants and a pairs of heels.

At the end of the day, it's all about what makes you happy. Everyone is entitled to an opinion but absolutely no one has the right to be wrong about the facts.

"....Today I'm a model.
Tomorrow I'm a fashion icon.
In the coming years, a global brand,
God willing....."

At the end of the day, it's all about what makes you happy. Everyone is entitled to an opinion but absolutely no one has the right to be wrong about the facts.

I have done a couple of runways but my first professional runway was the Mr. and Miss TECHNICAL UNIVERSITY OF KENYA where I was crowned as Mr. TECHNICAL UNIVERSITY OF KENYA 2015/2016.

What is fun and rewarding about your work?

The fun bit of modeling is that it is a free world, you dress how you want and nobody will question your dress code unlike in the office where it is strictly official.

The rewarding bit of it is that I get paid for runways and photo shoots.

Who can you say is your target employee in fashion and why?

Davidson Pete Frere – Musika Frere cloth line. He is a creative designer who does mostly official wear and a bit of casual. I love the way he designs his suits to suit teenagers and adults.

What projects are you currently working on?

Currently I am working on some cleaning project . Spraying of bedbugs in Landimawe to those residents affected.

What do you do when not working?

Networking and socializing. This gives me an opportunity to interact with people who have made it in this fashion and modeling industry. I also love working out in the gym.

Who is your mentor and why?

I would consider Jared Abuya – the U.S based Kenyan as my role model. This is majorly because this guy has achieved a lot including for T.I's clothing line but still remains humble and traces back his Kenyan roots.

What is your greatest aspiration in life?

To be a top model. Also to be a mentor to the upcoming models who have the potential to become great but are afraid to exploit their full potential.

What are the challenges you have faced so far and how have you overcome them?

A lot is said about men doing runways and men who do bright colours, overcoming such could just be to ignore and hang around people who encourage and inspire you. When I say so I mean hanging with people with the same interest.

Advice for aspiring models and entrepreneurs?

Being a model or any entrepreneur is like being an architect or a teacher. It requires passion and patience, you might have to knock on doors even when others are closed on your face.

I once dated a Fashion Designer so we used to do her Assignments together, there i gained the interest and through YouTube I learned the Art of making apparel.

My blog is about my Journey of being a designer. It's where I want people who love and wear my brand to see the growth which RG goes through. Back from when I was a stylist to now that am a designer, and further to what the future holds for us.

I started off as a celebrity fashion stylist and a private shopper but I didn't like the Quality of material and stitching I got .I decided to perfect my art and make apparels which were in a level ,I felt was international but still with an African touch .Being a designer I traveled a lot and decided to tell my fashion story and growth through my blog.

Late last year i did a feature with Zuqka magazine which made it to the cover page and the whole middle page. It was a milestone and the most memorable time for me as a fashion blogger.

Having my brand in an international Level. Having stores in the big Capitals in the World, blogging my life through all of that, is my five year goal.

At times we feel like giving up because of how far we see yourselves going and the journey seems long but we don't look at how far we have come . Be persistent and put God First. Don't fake it. Be real then you will grow. I've learned to appreciate change and to see and appreciate the good things out of bad situations. You have to write so you tend to think about the good things that happened.

Currently I am working on a Fashion Editorial shoot for RG which also includes ladies Apparel and developing my Blogging skills.

I style myself basically for any event I go to, in my blog, and some of my friends too.

My mentor is Alexander McQueen. I believe God inspires me. Through him I know better days are before me.

*"..Be persistent and put
God
First..."*

African Style by Ruby

My style is African print and fabrics. I use fabric manufactured in West Africa and Tanzania. I love using Kitenge, African Wax, Linen and Kikoy. I have lived in Africa, its nature is beautiful and exotic and a good source of inspiration for my designs.

Fashion designing is a roller coaster ride. Several outings to show case, competitions which are nerve wrecking, creativity and many ups and downs along the way. It also comes with some kind of fame. Then imagine doing a job that requires you to look fabulous, isn't that lovely?

My personal goal is to become a brand that everyone would want to reckon with. It takes hard work and determination but I will definitely reach there. I would love young people to look up to me as a role model. I am very keen on how I live my life. I avoid controversies because I hold highly my Christian values.

My mentor is Winnie Ojanga. She is very selfless and she shares ideas generously though she is based in Switzerland.

I do expos on beauty and fitness. I also host shows. I am a writer and creative director.

One must be very patient as it is a very competitive industry.

Ngash Sage Photography

I am a good student of watch and learn. I have studied photography through practical sessions, online classes and mentorship.

My career officially began in June 2014 after I had tarmac ked for years looking for jobs. I took a long reflection to look at my hobbies and of which I had passion for two hobbies: I do write poetry books (have written over 15 books unpublished) and photography. And so I championed in photography and here I am.

I am a great fun of nature so every time I am on the road am observant to what people are doing and I try to create an artistic imagery for a shoot, I watch a lot of movies and documentaries, I have a library of magazines .Through that I am able to get new ideas and concepts for most of my photo shoots.

The precious moments in my photography world are two. One is when Isabella (Bella Candice of BELLA THE COFFEE BERRY) believed in my work and we become a team and I did shoots for her fashion blog. Second memory is when I met Meron Wambui of Fashion Style Mogul she is just inspiration she always makes sure I do my best in every shoot. These are two ladies I will hold onto my memories forever.

My targets market varies but mainly Events, fashion bloggers, commercial and cooperate. Those are the main areas that I have put a lot of focus on and I love versatile demanding markets.

At first many people de motivated me and never believed in me but my late mum believed in me every day she would model for me and that is how I think I gathered courage to face this world. Lack of better camera and equipments, lack of finance and shooting grounds. I overcome these challenges by being positive on my course, shooting regularly and saving to get better equipments.

My career has opened my social life to different personalities and lifestyles, it has made me read more and view the world differently through my lenses. It's an incredible learning process where you meet people and communities you learn and see that we know less of humanity.

Currently I do special photography projects with children homes, where I give my all to them through photography, I love them and they make me feel like i am in another world...

I have two mentors ,one is my Business Mentor Daisy Tuzo (DOT, KENYA) whom even before starting my photography ,gave me a one hour talk over tea break in Nyeri and I had a turn view of my life, she has held my hand since then. My second mentor is More Argwings Kodhek, I call him my brother, he has seen my ups and downs and at no one day has he ever given up on me even at my worst shots .He is a strict and professional mentor .

I would love to own a portable studio,and start a mentorship club program for photography .

My advise to upcoming photograpers is to be humble, learn and help a fellow upcoming photographer, don't give up and be at your best. Be ready for any challenges.

BOBBIN BROTHERS

Bobbin brothers is owned by Bobbin ring, Ali musinguzi and Godfrey. The label started in 2013 January in Uganda and we did our first show in 2015 at the Nairobi Elegance Affair.

It was a successful show and there after we were called to participate at the Swahili Fashion Week 2016.

Our brand niche at the moment is costumes and kids wear .

SEMI-FORMAL-Man Talk

*M*any of us have made resolutions varying from being punctual, workout, getting a partner or even getting to the office on time but some things don't really change. The worst part of it is not only waking up to prepare but also trying to figure out what to wear. That's a dilemma that faces most people the night before or in the morning. So for now, how about we start with the basics; the basic wardrobe of a blue collar gentleman!

Semi-formal is what you wear in the office, also known as business suits. Formal attire is more of what you wear for the black or white tie events and galas, this is where tuxedos and bowties are involved.

It is a requirement for every man to have at least two suits in his closet. I mean am sure there's that one black suit you got for your cousin's wedding. First rule on getting a suit for any modern man, any kind of man who likes being in control, get a good tailor who will make a bespoke suit. If you're more of the detail kind of guy or if you simply just need a suit that fits you nicely, get a made-to-measure one.

The difference of the two (bespoke and made-to-measure) deserve an article on their own but in simple terms, they are all tailored suits for the customer. Made-to-measure is all about the customer's measurements, and unlike the made-to-measure the bespoke involves not only the measurements but also the pattern which is customized from the body structure of the client.

The whole point of getting a tailored suit is to get one that complements your body

Dark suits are preferred for semi-official. It's not only that they are easier to work with but also they contribute to a good working environment; I doubt much will happen around a guy in a neon green suit. A good example is the classic black suit which could basically be paired with any color of a shirt and a black and any solid colored tie, though it's a much safer and respectable option steering away from bright colored ties. Same case goes for the charcoal gray suit. In fact, according to Boehm 'signals that you've been around the block', this is best when presenting your pitch or presentation for the office or a business meeting. It just has that experience effect.

Having blazers is also a plus because it gives you versatility in your wardrobe. You could mix and match with different trousers or jeans although this is considered more of smart-casual than semi-formal. That's why it would be good for that casual Friday and/or Saturday in the office. Getting cardigans and sweaters will also help in adding versatility because a good gray sweater or cardigan will serve as a substitute for the blazer during hot seasons. In the cold season you could layer the sweater or cardigan under your suit or blazer.

White shirts will never go out of style so there's no limit to how many you want to own but at least have three. Green, light blue, green maroon, purple and for the courageous you can include pink are some of the other colors you could play with. You can also get patterned shirts but to be safe opt for the striped ones, mostly the vertical stripes which is not really an option for the well fed gentlemen because it gives an illusion of a smaller body. Black shirts are also advisable.

Not all accessories are a must have but they add an extra personal touch to your style. The necessary ones are the tie and belt. A tie makes statements more than the suit depending on various colors. But the basic tie as anything of solid color but not so bright. Save the sponge-bob tie and the huduma kwa wote for the office end of year party, (unless you work at a government office). Knit ties are also good for the office mainly for the more fashionable men. Although pocket squares are not as common in the office, they are slowly finding their way there.

A big misconception people have is matching one's pocket square and tie. They should not match although one can get away with it if the tie and pocket square are both mild solid colors. But generally a pocket square is meant to compliment the whole attire or, if it's anything to go by, you could match it with your shirt or a slightly different shade of the suit or tie.

In the previous issue I dived watches and we established no man should roam the face of the earth without a chronometer. Getting a subtle time piece is essential, a dress watch (one with the leather strap and golden/silver case) would go well with just about anything. Your shoe should match your belt and your watch straps (unless the straps are of metal). Having a black pair of shoe will blend with just about most of your business wardrobe assortment. Your socks should always be dark; think about black and navy blue. Leave the fun socks for the weekend. The immortal fashion conscious man might try them one of the many Fridays of the month.

Just to go through the basics in summary

- Have at least three suits, a black, charcoal gray and a navy blue suit
- Have two blazers
- At least two other formal trousers
- Three white dress shirts, two of blue and maroon, then he rest you could add as you discover your personal business style
- Four solid colored neck ties
- At least six pairs of socks in dark colors
- Black and brown laced shoes
- Black and brown belt
- A dress watch

And just like that your business wardrobe is sorted for a while. The good thing about this is that you can add more dress shirts depending on your personal style but don't forget to stick to the basics- keep it simple but sharp. We will talk about hygiene at a different time but a regular haircut would be most prudent.

Lastly, remember fashion is unique to everyone. It's different every season as well so begin to build your own style- that's eternal.....

MOTOR WORLD

LEXUS NX MEETS LAND ROVER DISCOVERY SPORT

Discovery should not have been named after such a great machine. It should have been known as Freelander sport. Why? Hold on, will give my reasons later.

The Lexus NX looks so "aggressive" as compared to its predecessors. Just look at the front view. You wanna be carried away by the looks. The stylish interior also will make you not regret any coin that you pay for the car. It also has a high vision camera unlike the Discovery Sport whose camera is not all that good. Land Rover has always had a weakness on this so let's treat it as their style.

You love speed, then the NX, gives you a chance to clock around 260km/h. Even if you cannot do this speed in most roads, at least you can boast that your car's speedometer reads that high. The 2.5L (2499CC) monster also has got about 194HP which you will agree was not fair taking into account that we have smaller cars with more horse power than this big machine.

For the multimedia side, the car has been given style at its best. It has a touch pad for this purpose, a rare thing in many high-end cars. This is a great achievement for the Lexus.

The car's space is compromised judging from the fact that the space is less. However this is evident when you compare the car with another one, the Discovery Sport in this matter. To forget the little space, the back seats, have got cup holders. At least you don't need to complain of space now. You have something to cover up that.

Now, the Discovery Sport, (which I like referring to as a Freelander on higher wheel or Freelander Sport). My reason for this is simple and clear. Why would you make a Vitz and call it a Toyota IST? All I mean is that the Land Rover Discovery TDV6 is so superb, massive and all that to have another "relative" that is less massive use its name. In addition, the Sport version looks more of the Freelander and so, it fits to be a Freelander more than a Discovery.

The question above is answered. No doubt. My assumption however is this, I hear the Freelander had “problems” and so, for the purpose of marketing, they named it after a great car. Just like the way children are named. You want the best for them and so name them after great people. Clear. The car is made with looks from the Range Rover and the Freelander.

This car is far much powerful than the NX, taking into account that it comes with a whole 240HP and something rare, 9 gears. Yeah, you got it right, nine gears. The car can be said to be a little bit stylist since it also comes with a climate control system.

The discovery also beats the NX on the aspect of space. There is more space at the back making it more comfy for the passage (s) using the seat (s). Despite, the naming and addition of the word “Sport”, this car is said not to be so sporty, but this comes as an added advantage since it is made to be good both off-road and on road, since it does not become perfect in any. But at least it handles them all well good.

The car also looks hardy from the look. The camera isn’t all that good though. The speedometer will read 20km/h less that of the Lexus but don’t mind, you may not reach that speed at any time either.

Verdict, Land Rover would have done much better taking into account that they already have great cars in the market. Lexus is doing great and moving miles ahead in their every production.

EDCB Centre for Nutrition and Wellness Diet Program: Lose 5kgs in 7 Days

This time round I am recommending a diet program that I and three other friends tried out in 2015. It is a pretty simple diet program that has actual results. On average, we all lost 3kgs by the fifth day. The program was a 7 day program that promised loss of 5kgs in the 7 days. And, it worked! All the food we ate was provided by Judy who gets her supplies from organic farmers.

First of all, let me give a warning. Being on a diet program is not easy as your eating is restricted in terms of portions and what you eat. This is a journey that you take on knowing you have to finish it up no matter what. Day one of any program is usually the hardest. You are at your worst emotionally and mentally and want to give up even before you make progress. So, you have to have all the motivation you need and the best support system. As the days go on, one becomes used to the new way of eating and actually enjoys it.

During the program, you will eat a lot of fruits and vegetables. The first day is a melon day. You eat nothing but melons all day. When push comes to shove, one can fall back to pawpaw slices. If you feel that is not working, you can always steam some vegetables such as broccoli or cauliflower and add carrots and any other fresh organic vegetable. Day two is a pure vegetable day. One gets to have smoothies made of leafy greens and foods made of whole grains and vegetables. You can always look at my blog to see what we specifically had.

By the third day, all emotions brought about by hunger are gone, and hunger is no longer an every-second vocabulary. On day three one has a mixture of green vegetables and fruits all day long. By this day, you will have already got used to having small portions of food and will have loved eating fruits and veggies. On day four of the program, one gets to eat a lot of bananas, which are rich in potassium, and pumpkins, which are rich in zinc.

On day 5 to 7, you get to have actual food. On the 5th day, one gets to have rice and kuku or fish as long as it is white meat for protein sources, while on the 6th day you get to eat rice and assorted vegetables and on day 7 you eat brown rice and assorted vegetables again. On these three days, one is also expected to have a variety of fruits. All through the program, one is encouraged to have at least 3 litres of water in a day.

I would highly recommend to anyone who decided to participate in the program to go in psychologically, mentally and emotionally ready for the program. Make sure you do not give up at any time! Also make sure you exercise every other day you are on a diet program. Lastly, I highly recommend to anyone who is looking to kick start their weight loss journey this year to try this program. Watch out for good things from Fitddict this year. A lot is lined up for us.

A TASTE OF THAILAND

Hello travelers and vacation lovers, this month I am going to talk about one of my favorite destinations of all my travel experiences: the fascinating Thailand. It is one of the most affordable destinations, considering that you can get fabulous hotels for about 100 USD (10,000 Ksh) a day and much less if you are not looking for luxury; and food is very cheap too, plus there is a nine-and-half hours direct flight from Nairobi to Bangkok that if booked well in advance can go for 50-60 thousand shillings for a return ticket (much less than most flights to other destinations in Africa). It is a perfect destination for your honeymoon, but it also can be the perfect place if you are looking for some relax or some adventure.

As for me , I just followed the popular tourist itineraries and my stops were: Bangkok-Railay-KohPhangan-KohTao-KohSamui.

BANGKOK

Bangkok is a very charming city ;despite the heat and the traffic(with respective pollution) you cannot miss to visit it at least once if you travel to Thailand.

Having arrived during the weekend, the first stop was at the weekend market Chatu chak. It's a huge market where they sell everything .After the market, because it was on the way, I also visited the MBK center, a huge shopping mall where you can buy all kinds of good things at a good price...if you know how to bargain!

Other places of interest that I visited in Bangkok were the Wat Pho, Meuang Lak, Khao San Road, and the neighborhood Sao Ching Cha. Unfortunately I not have been able to visit the royal palace and at least one of the floating markets typical of this city.

From Bangkok I then made two trips outside to Ayutthaya and Lopburi.

Ayutthaya is worth a visit for its ruins and its magnificent temples. It was once the capital of Thailand and is now a popular tourist destination that can be visited by bicycle.

Lopburiis,famous for its monkeys, living in the ruins, these monkeys are very cheeky and you have to be very careful with your personal items

RAILAY

From Bangkok, with a domestic flight I went to Krabi and from there by bus to Ao Nang, and finally with a boat I arrived to Railay. Famous for its beautiful beaches surrounded by the mountains, Railay is one of the most photographed landscapes of Thailand, as well as an excellent starting point for excursions to the nearby islands.

From Railay I visited the Phi Phi islands, where I could walk on the beach where the movie "The Beach" with a young Leonardo Di Caprio (I loved that film) was filmed. Then I made other interesting tours, such as to Poda Island, another "postcard" landscape. I also made a trip to experience the thrill of being on an elephant, short tour but exciting.

KOHPHANGAN

It is the island of fun, with its full moon party. For me it was just a beautiful island where I relaxed and had a few days of sun, sea and beautiful beaches. From Phangan I had a great trip to the national park of Ang Thong, one of the most popular destinations in Thailand.

The weather in Phangan was better than Railay, even though there were some showers in the evenings. If you are looking for a relaxing vacation on the beach, Koh Phangan is the island for you.

KOHTAO

By boat it is a one hour ride from Koh Phangan. The island is very tiny and a little less touristic than the other islands in the area. The weather here is mostly sunny and warm.

In Koh Tao I did not move much, but I visited the beautiful white sandy beach of Shark Bay. Shark bay, as the name suggests, is a huge habitat for sharks, however they are not harmful.

KOH SAMUI

The final destination of the trip was Koh Samui. Currently considered to be now spoiled by the mass-tourism, but you can still find here semi deserted beaches and places out of the ordinary. As for me, having little time, I settled with the classic tours and I have to say that,after all, I liked the island anyway.

Basically I was in Chaweng beach, the most famous and longest beach of the island. It is a fine white sand beach, very lovely and luckily not crowded in the days I was there.

Well, that's all... It has been a short holiday but intense enough, a taste of Thailand let's say, and surely I was not disappointed despite the not excellent weather. Maybe one day I'll be back to see other areas that I have left out of this trip, daring a little more to stay out of the usual tourist itineraries.
